WHAT IS CSA?

Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) connects people with the farms and farmers who grow their food. Members choose to support a local farm by investing in a share of the harvest before the season begins. At Greenmoore Gardens, this offsets the expense of planting and harvest, allowing our farmers to focus on growing a wide variety of high quality produce and delivering it to our Members throughout the growing season.

Join us for our sixth CSA season! We became USDA-Certified Organic in 2011, which means that no pesticides, herbicides, antibiotics, food additives, or genetically modified organisms are used on the farm. Each week we will deliver plentiful, diverse, nutritious shares to our members, along with field notes from our farmers, tasty recipes, and invitations to on-farm events.

We encourage you to visit us and experience the farm for yourself!

OUR MISSION

At Greenmoore Gardens, we are as passionate about our produce as we are about our local and global communities. Our growing methods have always focused on being gentle to the earth and committed to sustainability. Our mission is not only to strive for excellence and quality, variety, and nutritional value, but also to serve the local community with a safe and secure local food source. Greenmoore Gardens works year round to provide these benefits to our members, the community, and the planet.

"As a volunteer, I experienced first hand what goes into bringing vegetables to my table every week, regardless of the weather! My appreciation for each bite of food I took this season was greatly heightened. It is truly a privilege to partake of this bounty. I cannot thank you enough."
